damn kanoko is cute af. Unlike many other negative reviews, I don't see the fact that this an RPGMaker game as something negative in itself. I've played many good\/decent RPGMaker games, so the issue is not the medium in itself, but the story, visuals and mechanics that you try to implement. And sadly, Stargazer either underachieves or outright messes those up.

Although the graphics were fairly nice and the premise is kinda cute, that's as far as it goes. Despite the premise, there is apparently nothing too different about the story so far. The game involves a bunch of annoying fetch quests that make you go back and forth collecting stuff for silly reasons, such as a girl's club that wants you to help them steal or a beautification club that wants you to hunt butterflies. Combat is okay, but it's a little annoying that you can't see how much mana you have and how much health your enemies have. Doesn't really help you manage your moves.

There was also a RIDICULOUS gap in difficulty between the enemies in the first and the second area. We go from foxes that would die in 2 hits and cause 5 damage at most to badgers that take much more and can cause 20+ damage. You also don't get much money for each kill, so you need to farm A LOT to save up for new armor. This + the fetch quests make the game become more of a chore, and there is little to no actual story between all of that walking around.

Furthermore, although I said the visuals are nice, I was talking about the pixel graphics. Character sprites and design are pretty flawed though. If you check the trading cards, you'll see that most female characters have the same face, and LITERALLY ALL OF THEM have pale skin and eyes the same shade of blue. (Meanwhile, some faceless NPCs' pixel sprites have neon blue hair. I don't understand how any artist couldve thought that making all relevant characters a bunch of same-faced people with the same colour palette was a remotely creative idea.)

Anyway. As much as I tried, Stargazer has probably been the only game to ever make me ragequit out of boredom. As I said, it feels more like a chore to the point it gets frustrating. I may try and give it another chance, but I don't know when that will happen. Can't bring myself to recommend it, unfortunately.. Amazingly funny game

- + Simple controls
- + Collectables
- Recycled enemy/bosses
- Short unless you go for 100%
- Too easy

The game has a nice style to it, simple yet effective and pleasing to look at. The controls are simple which is nice when you buy upgrades to your dash later on. You can buy upgrades with gems you have to get in each level and some of these are tricky without upgrades. The dev's have stated each gem can be gotten without using the dash but some are really frustrating to do without it. Points are meaningless unless you want more catpaws but the game is so easy you really shouldn't need to grind nor need to go for the top score to get many. I am already at world 6 with 900 catpaws and have used them on the world-map for some hidden items.

There are 7 worlds so plenty of levels to play and each one sports their own boss, the final level of each actual world being original and not an enemy you see in the level.

As much a I like the game though even the original bosses have similar patterns to defeat them which can be a let down but understandable with the simple style the game has.

However I feel this game could of done better without a boss at the end of the normal levels. They are just bigger versions of the enemy you fight along the way in the same level. Some bosses later on have different attacks maybe but not different enough to justify this many bosses. They are just recolours over a pattern you already faced before. I feel they are there just to drag out the game for 20 seconds longer per level which is not good IMO.

Time attack proves how short the levels are, each time attack gives you 100 seconds to get to the end and even if you screw up a few times you often have 20 seconds to spare. If you don't care for the gems the game will be short eve with over 60 levels.

Overall it is nice but again the bosses at the end of each level just make the game less fun to play in the long-run at least for me. I give the game the thumbs-up however, I not really seen any bugs and the gems are the only real challenge I see so there is something for everyone who loves platformers. Take out the reused bosses and the game is pretty solid. Very quick (~3 hours) but very fun. I've done one playthrough so far, but it looks like the author did a good job of making sure my choices were taken into account.

Also thirstiness is rewarded if it's consistent so embrace your inner furry. Fast phased fun game. I don't think it's worth that much money though. Also achievement section is broken so you will need to play an extra hour to complete the achievements. What an odd game...

Normally I play entire point and click games without any help or walkthroughs...well rarely at least, but this game was something else. I felt I was absolutly more interested in the story of the game, than many of the puzzles. There was also alot to read, so I'll guess I kinda got impatient (for a really patient guy normally).

Because of the lack of achievements (I am happy for that this time), it was simpler to just push the hint button frequently or skip a puzzle, just to see the story....I tend to want to know how I solve a puzzle though, but a few of the minigames in this game I couldn't understand. So frustrating.

In the end. I like that there was a good story, many fun puzzles, and a few horror elements.

I'm gonna end it here with something weird. Whenever I started the game or alt tabbed, the game had to reload every single time. It didn't take a second, but almost half a minute each time, and that is really strange for a point and click game. The first game in this serie took only one second. I'll guess computer power doesn't mean a thing for this game.

Recommend buying these two "Nightmare adventure" games in a bundle. If I am not wrong there will come more games in this serie, so watch out that too.. Like "The Blair Witch Project" before it, this movie by directors Anna Brady and Lester Francois is a horror film framed as a documentary.

The exposition begins with the filmmaker and protagonist arriving at a seemingly idyllic community in search of a story. While the neon plumage and bizarre mating behaviors that prevail are unsettling, the people do seem pleasant and happy and friendly, at least at first. Increasingly, it becomes clear that the language they speak only appears to be English. In reality, their conversations are specious lunacy if not wholly unintelligible gibberish. The audience is drawn inexorably to the conclusion that here the definitions of words are fluid and vague. Evidence continues to mount until, after some detective work, we discover that this community exhibits total uniformity of thought. The action climaxes with the filmmaker trapped and surrounded in a cultish society devoid of reason or purpose or joy. Soon we reach the shocking final revelation: that $75 DLC which provides 2 additional pronouns to that twine game highlighting the struggles of rich college protestors fighting the evils of manspreading astronomers by blocking off the entrance to the non-gay bar that was rumored to have once served gamer clientele . . . was submitted to greenlight from your IP!

Ultimately, this movie is a rehash of well-worn tropes likely to bore anyone familiar with the horror genre. I am particularly dismayed by the portrayal of women throughout as childish, unaccountable victims. The use of hipster culture to signal an insane and credulous society is a cheap expository device that ruins much of the suspense. In summary, this work is uninnovative, offensive trash. 0 bottles of Mountain Dew out of 10.

Disclosure: Mountain Dew is nasty.

The good: A compelling and touching story narrated by Patrick Stewart. The art style is also nice.

The not so good: While this succeeds as a story-telling device, it's lackluster as a game. The puzzles aren't always compelling, and many of them feel out of place.

Overall, this was around a 7\10 for me.. I enjoyed playing this game a lot. It starts out pretty easy and gets harder by increasing the enemies and types of enemies as you progress through the levels. It involves climbing, running, shooting, crawling and all the things that make roomscale and tracked controllers fun. It also has onward style trackpad movement as well as arm swinger movement.

Pros:

Fun

Family friendly
Accurate shooting guns
1 hit kill head shots
Pretty long campaign for an indie game
Nice original graphics
Fast paced action

The climbing is really well done and a nice addition to an FPS

Cons:

Still some bugs to be worked out (sound cuts in and out in busy scenes)
I had some frame drops really deep into the game
Some checkpoints are too far apart
no difficulty settings
No multiplayer or coop
no voice acting or story driven dialogue

Overall I would recommend this game at the $20 it currently is at. I think if you have kids than its a no brainer. I hope some of the bugs can be worked out quickly.. POLAND BALL CAN INTO SPACE. Great mindless two stick shooter game. Just have to get use to jumping using up.. My opinion on this game definitely changed after the ending, but I'm not gonna spoil anything. Apart from that, the atmosphere and environment were really strong and it felt oddly soothing to play despite the tension. The voice acting and musicVSFX really added to the whole experience and if you like atmospheric games where you actually have to do things (there are some more actiony sequences with shooting and dealing with creatures), I would definitely recommend it.

Overall, a unique and interesting game that's made even more interesting with the ending. I'm still thinking about it.. Ganked few people, got their loot and it feels good. :]. great game for doctor who fans!
